

Call Tomorrow

Between You, Ronda L Wery, Chris Andrews and Kristi Dunks

Hi All,

The call starts recording automatically once more than one caller is on the line. Just FYI!

Monica,

After our call tomorrow, it usually takes about an hour for them to email the recording. I will forward it to you then.

Talk to you tomorrow.

Sounds good. Should be able to take it into Garageband and remove any extraneous chatter... not that we ever engage in extraneous chatter :)

Yes, we are always straight to business. Thank god for edits. :)

Analysis

Here's the latest draft of my prezi analysis (including a non-fancy-shmancy video); I'd welcome your comments and questions.

Also, I'm always happy to take time out of my day to look at yours!

I like this, Chris. I think your book background looks much better than my hotel wallpaper background for the video, but alas, that's all I have!

Looks good, Chris. I like that you included a video in your Prezi. I only have a few minor suggestions. In the section prior to the video where you're going around the circle with the key words, maybe don't zoom in so much on "Space" – the comments around it are difficult to read. And in your video you might consider putting the overlaid questions as text in a darker color (not white). They flashed on the screen so quickly that I couldn't read them. But it looks great. As far as where to link to on the last screen how about just the homepage? Fantastic job!

Yeah, I figured I'd just link it back to the homepage. What's our url again?

Thanks for the comments & suggestions!

Hehe. I simply forgot to add a smiley there--I actually DO remember our much-discussed and agreed-upon URL. :)

I probably would have sent it anyway, smiley face or not. I'm a great doubter of humanity :)

Reopening survey

Monica, here is the code for the re-opened survey:

However, I'm thinking we may want to make changes based on today's reflections. We'll see , eh?

I don't think we should make changes to a survey on which our site is built. It totally invalidates everything to this point and then we have no data for the website.

I haven't seen anything come through this morning on any of my emails. Have you sent your PowerPoint?

If it was a really huge file you may need to use something like www.transferbigfiles.com (Kristi had to)

Unless we can separate the new survey from the old, I agree with Monica.

Ronda L Wery

August 1 at 8:54am

I promise I'm not trying to throw in a monkey wrench and I do understand what you are saying.

We can separate the two surveys easily, and I'm not saying we have to.

This would probably be better as a topic for MOO or even our conference call, but let me just say this: Not for the sake of this particular class, but for the future of the website, we could consider treating the initial 88 responses as a pilot study.

We would then compare notes to clarify any problematic questions/terms/concepts that we think may have confused or skewed the data.

Then, with our newfound agency and skills in the realm of social networking, we could revise the survey and then recruit a much larger sample size going forward in the future.

Treating the first survey as a pilot study makes sense, and is not a bad idea (as there are many ways we could improve upon it). I do think Monica & Kristi have a point--we don't want to revise the existing survey into a new version, as the data would change and old responses wouldn't mix well. A new survey, based upon and heavily revised from the old, would make much more sense.

The time for changing things that severely impact the direction the website is going is now over... there I said it. :) But expanding on it later, when this semester is over... I'm open to that That's exactly what I intended. Sorry if I failed to convey it clearly. We are all on the same page.
